

Objective of the workshop:

Electronics and Communication Engineering is the specialized field concerned with the use of devices and systems for the acquisition or acceptance, processing, storage, display, analysis, protection, disposition, and transfer of information. Presently The branch of engineering deals with implementation of applications, principles and algorithms developed within many related fields, for example solid-state physics, radio engineering, telecommunications, control systems, signal processing, systems engineering, computer engineering, instrumentation engineering, electric power control, robotics, and many others. In view of the present scenario, this Student Workshop has been planned to increase the awareness and the interest among the undergraduate students, regarding the role of simulation in research in electronics and communication. The main focus of the workshop is to present the recent trend in the area and current research interest in Universities and Government laboratories and Institutions. Besides the lecture session the hands on session will also enrich the students.
